

Overview of the Amended Title IV Regulations

By Tyler VanderVen, Partner

The amended Title IV regulations are effective July 1, 2024. If your higher education institution receives Title IV funds, we recommend that you familiarize yourself with these regulations now to ensure compliance.

The U.S. Department of Education (ED) amended the Title IV regulations to strengthen its ability to identify high-risk events promptly. The amended regulations relate to four areas:

- Financial responsibility
- Administrative capability
- Certification procedures
- Ability to Benefit (ATB)

While all four areas are important to understand, this article focuses on financial responsibility.

Amended Financial Responsibility Regulations

With the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) delays, institutions' enrollment numbers and related net tuition and housing income are at risk. This can present challenges for many institutions, especially when combined with the ongoing rise in inflation, heightened interest rates, and uncertainty about donor contributions and state and federal funding.

It is not surprising that ED is seeing an increase in institutions closing with little warning. CapinCrouse serves more than 120 higher education institutions across the U.S., and we have seen a downward trend in ED composite scores over the years, especially post-CARES Act funding. ED's oversight is necessary not only to secure the federal loans issued but, more importantly, to protect students from a sudden closure of their institution, which can affect students' ability to complete their intended degrees.

The U.S. Department of Education amended the Title IV regulations to strengthen its ability to identify high-risk events promptly.

The amended regulations enable ED to monitor institutions' ability to meet:

- Four specific financial and administrative obligations;
- 14 mandatory triggers; and
- 14 discretionary triggers

If ED deems an institution is not financially responsible, ED can require the institution to provide financial protection, often in the form of a letter of credit. Multiple letters of credit could be required if ED determines that there are differing instances of noncompliance.

Notification Requirements

Institutions must notify ED no later than 21 days after any of the following events occur.

Ability to meet financial or administrative obligations if an institution:

1. Fails to make repayments for any debt (or liability) arising from its participation in Title IV.
2. Fails to make a payment regarding an undisputed financial obligation for more than 90 days.
3. Fails to satisfy payroll obligations.
4. Borrows funds from retirement plans or restricted funds without authorization.
